Welcome & introduction

#InternetArchiveForum

Every forum has a different focus - build a community of practice around controlled digital lending Controlled digital lending is a way that libraries can lend digital books based on their physical collections.

- The Open Libraries project was started from our strong belief that everyone deserves to learn.
- We want to offer up greatest digital library the internet has ever seen. To the world. For free.
- Our goal is to bring 4M modern books online
 - Why 4M? Size of a large metro public library
- We think that everyone, regardless of where they live, should have ready access to a great library.
- And we think it should be available on phones & devices that people turn to for information today
- We want to make sure that when people turn to their phones, they have access to the vetted, trusted information in libraries

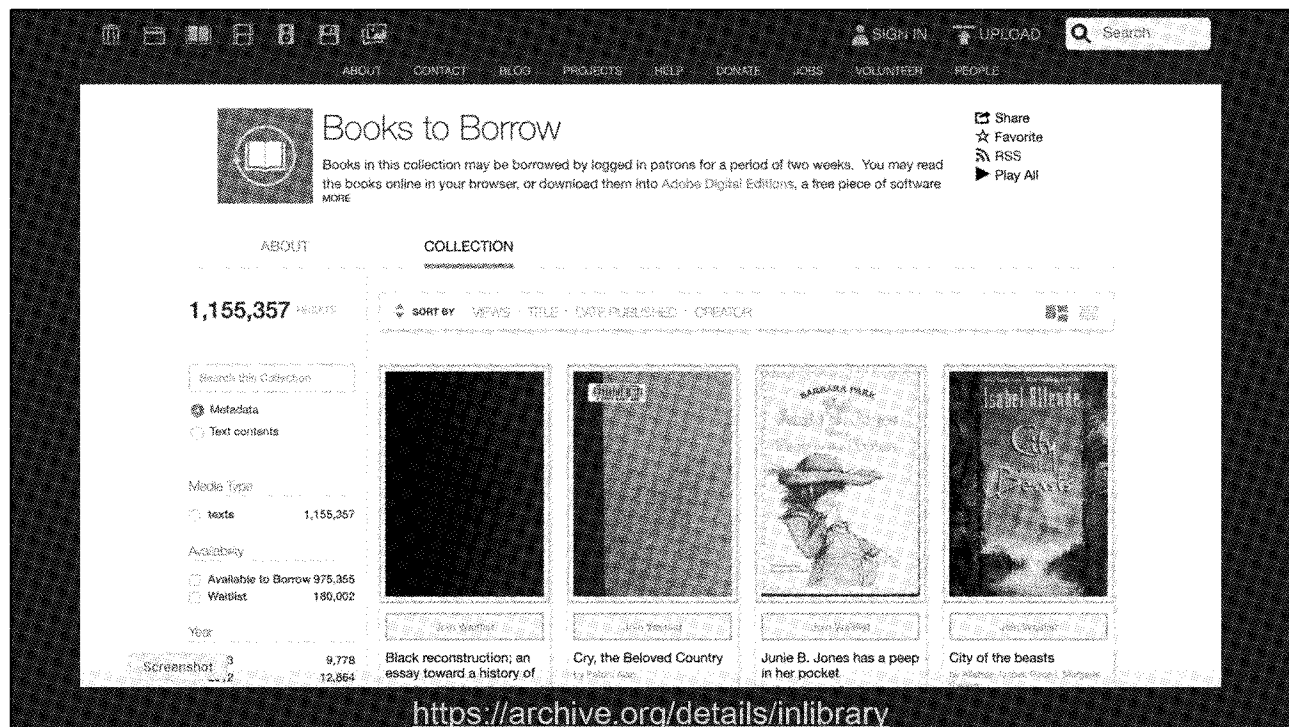

Have been doing CDL in Boston since 2011

Michelle Wu - writing on topic for more than 15 years

Authors of whitepaper here as well

Value: here's how we can make 20th century literature available - in copyright

In addition to being a digital library, Internet Archive is also a physical library - Internet Archive has been acquiring books. These are the basis for the books we lend. Because we have one physical copy of these 1.1M books, we can loan one digital copy to a user at a time.

The Open Libraries program empowers libraries to become digital libraries & serve their patrons where they live.

Overview of the day

Conversational day

Acknowledge & thank SFPL for the space & assistance

Internet Archive & SFPL have a long partnership - digitization, web archiving, all of the services that IA offers to libraries

And to tell us more, we have the City Librarian of SFPL with us this morning.
Please join me in welcoming Michael Lambert to the stage...

Let's give Wikipedia contributors access to the best library ever.

What if we could give Wikipedia editors access to the best online library possible? What if Wikipedia readers could dig deeper to the sources of information? Our goal is to turn all Wikipedia citations blue--by linking them to the actual sources. Turns out we've already started.

Fix the Broken Web Links

Started 5 years ago:

- Archive all web citations in Wikipedia
- Then fix broken links

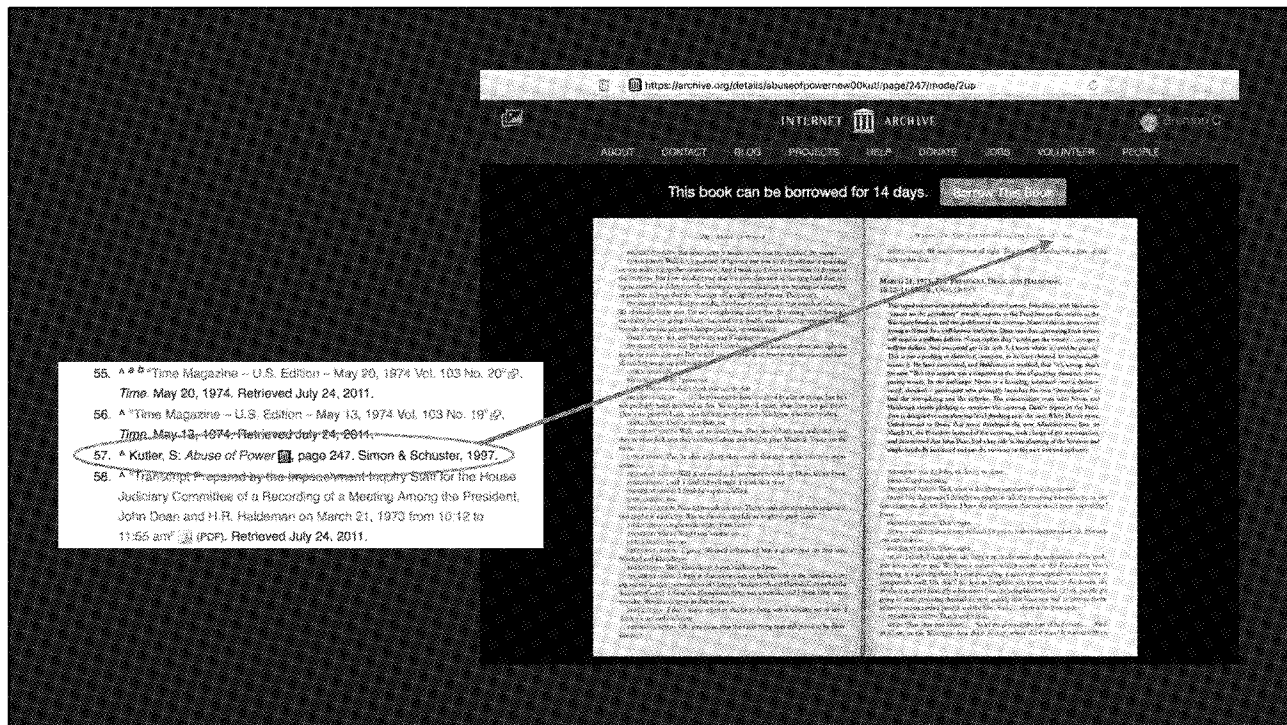

Now more than 10 million Wayback links in Wikipedia

When Wikipedia Readers go to a site, they go most often to:

the Internet Archive's Wayback Machine. Then books, journals,

20+ years collecting, 5+ years dedicated to wikipedia pages. Fixed more than 10 Million links from in 24 wikipedia language editions.

needed to make more things digital to weave them into the web

the core of information - making access into digital and we are trying to...

Wikipedia integration

Language	Total number of links to books added	Number of unique books linked to	Total number of unique books with ISBNs that are cited
English	122,271	43,423	1,211,395
Greek	2,190	1,414	46,024
Arabic	3,942	2,659	65,509
Bosnian	443	342	7,592

Need to make more things digital to weave them into the web

We excel at reformatting - turning analog into digital

And we are ramping up...

And it's not just libraries. Even Amazon reflects this chasm between 1923 and the eBooks era. How do we discover the out-of-print books. Orphan works. The important books that are missing online today? They are sitting in our libraries.
